Blue Mountains, N. S. W. "Govett's Leap".

Govett's Leap, so named after the surveyor who discovered the place, is situated about a mile from Blackheath, the nearest Railway Station. Around here are many fine views, the "Leap" is the principal one. Looking down to the Valley of the Grose the landscape extends for about fifty miles, but in viewing distances in Australia one is apt on account of the atmosphere, to be deceived as to their extent.
